RUSTIC TILE

Antique tiles have been used for a long period of time. However, with the change of modern aesthetic trends, the traditional antique tiles have evolved into modern rustic tile products with a better sense of design and distinct styles. Traditional antique tiles with brown as its major color tones, and adoption of more saturated colors, the overall color renders a heavy and stable feeling. As for modern rustic tiles, they choose black, white and gray as the main color, whose color performance is livelier and brisker, and its

Artsum's rustic tile series includes diverse surface textures, like marble, stone, wood, concrete, terrazzo, fabric, metallic. Through the use of advanced digital inkjet technology and a variety of surface overlaying treatment process, a more vivid surface effect and higher texture fineness is achieved. In this way, the special touch of different surfaces, concave and convex texture becomes much more natural

Artsum adopts a more abundant material formula, which can produce personalized and more diverse glaze colors, and can better satisfy the needs of architects in the modern era.

Meanwhile, Artsum' antique tile witnesses further improvement in terms of its water absorption rate, hardness, wear resistance, anti-slip coefficient, outperforming the traditional antique tiles. Thus, its application scenario can extend from residential space to various types of commercial building space. When the application scenario requires the slip resistance up to R12 or even R13, dry grits, coarse particles and other processes

Designers can also apply different sizes and shapes to cater to the various styles of minimalist design trends.
